

Felice Vitulano

Born in Molfetta in 1974, Felice Vitulano graduated with top marks in Electronic Engineering and earned a Master's in Business Administration at MIP Milan Polytechnic University.

His career with the Exprivia Group began in 2000 when he oversaw the development of solutions, and later became Project Manager for leading national and international companies.

From 2006 to 2012, he was head of the Business Intelligence and Information Management Service Line.

From 2012 to 2014, he managed the production area focused on the development of data-driven solutions.

From 2015 to 2018, he was head of the Application and Infrastructures Services Business Unit where he coordinated a team of 150 consultants working with various public and private clients.

He has coordinated the Group's innovation activities since 2019, with a particular focus on innovative technologies and the development of an open innovation ecosystem.

In May 2019, he became an ambassador of the University of Salento for the Innovation Management department.