Aerospace&Defence

We design systems that make the most complex scenarios simple.

Safety on flights, in land and sea transports, environmental risk monitoring and management, control of operations areas and of digital assets: these are today's outstanding challenges. The long experience of Exprivia in defence and civilian applications, together with the skills acquired in the aerospace sector, allow the implementation of systems for defence and preparedness where Information Technology is the best means for protecting people and vehicles, both military and civilian.

CyberSecurity

Optimising investments to reduce overall risk.

In a world surrounded by interconnected smart devices, where data is the real fuel that drives innovation and where the new technologies often outcompete the ability to govern them, security is becoming a factor of intrinsic importance.
